Communists."

I understand that you testified that you weren't at Unite the Right; however, would it be possible for you at an NSM event to look at a group and to identify who were the homosexuals, who were the self-hating whites, who were the hardcore Communists?

A. If they were signaling that, then yes.

Q. How would you signal that?

A. A lot of them held up signs. They have symbols, symbolism that they wear, flags that they fly. There's a lot of indicators to where they would stand politically.

Q. What if someone were not holding a sign?

A. Well, then you would have to listen to what's coming out of their mouth.

Q. The next paragraph starts: "As the orderly and disciplined NF formation approached the permitted rally area, a number of fistfights and other physical confrontations broke out as the leftists began a feeble effort to try to stop the forward progress of the determined NF column to reach our permitted rally point."

Is that what happened?

A. I don't know the answer.

Q. Do you know anything about the fistfights and physical confrontations that broke out?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know whether the opposition by the leftists was feeble?

A. In this situation, no, but it usually is.

Q. Usually the opposition to NSM participants is feeble; is that right?

A. The people who oppose us are a bunch of fags. They're no match for us, and it doesn't matter how much of them there are. So I'd venture to say in this case here, it sounds like the numbers I heard were a thousand Antifa showed up, and they more than likely thought they were going to overpower the people on the Right, and it did happen that way, that they showed up with a thousand to 1,200 on the Right side. So those are that "The NSM is simply the most experienced organization in America today, having planned and participated in literally dozens of events spanning decades."

Is that accurate?

A. I'm sorry. I got a -- what's the -- how does the paragraph begin?

Q. The paragraph begins "It is of great significance."

A. Okay. I got it.

Q. And then there's an italicized sentence that says: "The NSM is simply the most experienced organization in America today, having planned and participated in literally dozens of events spanning decades."

Is that accurate?

A. Sounds like propaganda, but, yeah, you could say that's accurate.

Q. And then the next paragraph the report states: "Our admiration and thanks go out to the professionalism exhibited by the highly trained men at the League of the South who took point in the shield wall that pushed through the line of Red opposition."
